PROTEST ENTERED ON BILL THAT BANS HEARING CULTS
Mrs. K. B. Johnson, representing the Citizens Protective Association, appeared before the Joint Congressional Committee on Education and Labor yesterday in opposition to the public health feature of the Kenyon bill for the creation of a department of welfare. She proposed an amendment that "nothing in the bill shall interfere with a citizen selecting his own method of healing."
Objection to the public health provision was raised by Samuel Solomon, also of the Citizens Protective Association, on the ground that it would discriminate against many schools of healing. Solomon declared that the public health service is now carrying on propaganda for a school of medicine.
Further legislation regulating the height of buildings in the National Capital was provided in a bill introduced Thursday by Senator Capper, of Kansas, and referred to the Senate District Committee for approval.
Sixteenth street, and Massachusetts avenue were particularly, and the District Commissioners were given the discretion of naming other streets upon which the new regulations would apply. The height of buildings under provision of the bill would be limited to seventy feet and the building line 150 feet from the sidewalk. Violators of the law are subject to a fine of $5,000 and a year in the penitentiary in addition to the fine.
Action may be brought against builders either by the District Commissioners or property owners.
